The Grandfather and his family

5 I open the door and Ramu goes inside the room where Geeta is waiting. When I hear their cries of surprise, I close the door behind him. I am praying that the spices will work their magic, and solve this family's problems. (page 63)

In this section Ramu and his daughter are speaking, but we do not know what they are saying. Read on to page 64 to find out the result of their conversation, then try to imagine what they said to each other. Complete the dialogue below.

Geeta: Father, what are you doing here?

Ramu: I came to get some medicine for your grandfather, he's got terrible bad stomach pains. And why are you here?

Geeta:

6 "What have you brought me?" asks Haroun curiously. And suddenly I know what I must give him. Not the gun. Violence is not the answer to Haroun's problems. Instead, I take the silk bag of lotus root from my neck and put it into his hands. (page 73)

Now imagine that Tilo gave the gun to Haroun instead of the lotus root. Write the end of Haroun's story.

C After Reading

7 I have broken too many of the rules, and now I must be punished. (page 61)

Complete the table below by answering the following two questions:

- a) Which of the Mistress rules does Tilo break?
- b) What do you think are the reasons for each rule?

Number	a) Rule	b) Reason
1	Do not look in a mirror (p18, p71)	It is important not to be vain because a Mistress must not want anything for herself. She is there only to help others.
2

8 Imagine you are a social worker and you are trying to help one of the people described in The Mistress of Spices. Write a letter to a charitable organisation and ask for money to provide help for them. Give examples of the problems the person is having and say how you can use the money to help improve their life.
