► 24 1a/b Text

- Hi Julia! Nice to see you again!
- Hi Carl! Yeah, the last time we saw each other was at Scott's, Christmas two years ago, wasn't it?
- Wow, that's right. It's been two years. I can't wait to catch up with you.
- Well, Scott has some news ...
- Where is Scott anyway? He's always late, just like he was in university. He's probably at home getting ready ... perfect shirt, perfect shoes, perfect hair. Some things never change.
- Aw, poor Scott. You always did tease him so! But this time he has a good excuse. He sent me a message about half an hour ago. He'll be here soon. He's just bringing Karen to the station.
- Karen? Who's that? One of his many girls?
- She's his new girlfriend! But this time it's serious. They've known each other for almost a year and are great together. She's a teacher in Edinburgh.
- Wow, so they have a long-distance relationship?
- Yeah, for now they do.
- Well, you know how I feel about long-distance relationships. It's great in the beginning when both see everything through rose-coloured glasses.
- You always were such a pessimist! They've been together for almost a year! Their relationship seems to be working fine!
- Think about it. How can they manage? They live more than 500 kilometres apart. He's here in London and she's in Edinburgh. How often do they see each other? How can they really get to know each other? Maybe they have an open relationship?
- What do you mean, open relationship? They see each other three weekends a month. They have more time for their hobbies and friends during the week, and then when they see each other, they spend the whole weekend together. So, the time they spend together is more intense! Look, here he comes ...

- ▲ Hi guys! Sorry, I had to bring ...
- ... Karen to the station. We know!
- ▲ Ah, I see you've heard the news, Carl!
- Yeah, Julia told me about your new Scottish girlfriend. Did you meet on a business trip?
- ▲ No, we met on a dating app. We chatted a bit, exchanged phone numbers, had a couple of video chats ... Then I drove to Edinburgh and surprised her one Saturday.
- Imagine that! Scott, you've really grown up! So what are you two gonna do? A long-distance relationship isn't easy.
- ▲ Yeah, that's true. And we do want to live together. She has lived in London before and would like to come back. She's got some contacts and wants to look for a new job here.
- Doesn't that seem a bit rushed? You've only known each other for about a year, haven't you?
- ▲ Yeah, but we have a lot in common: We both love art, architecture, hiking ... We understand each other without even saying a word. I have to say, I think I've found my soulmate.
- Super, Scott! You're in love! And you, Julia? Don't you want to get married? You and Mark have been together for ages!

- Yeah, you're right ... almost ten years. But you know, I don't really believe in "getting married". Our relationship is fine as it is and we don't plan on getting married. But our little family is growing!
- ▲ Wow! You're having a baby?! Congratulations!
- What? You think I'm pregnant? No! Mark and I have decided to adopt a dog! We've been to the animal shelter a few times and have spent some time with him. We can bring him home in a couple of days. Fido is a beautiful Labrador and so cuddly soft! Of course we want to have children at some point, but not yet. Who knows ... maybe in a couple of years. And you, Carl?
- Well, I don't plan on getting married again. The divorce is finally settled. We signed the papers last week and now I'm a happy single.

- Good morning and a warm welcome to “UK At The Moment”. I’m Charles Smith and I’ll be here with you for the next three hours. Today we’re going to talk about something that affects people all over the world. It’s a very special feeling. We’re going to talk about friendship. Because today, the 30th of July, is International Friendship Day. How did it start? Sociologist Rita Martin is here to tell us all about it. Good Morning, Rita!
- Good morning, Charles! Thanks for having me on the show. So, International Friendship Day started around ten years ago. In 2011 the UN General Assembly officially recognised this special day to highlight the importance of friendship and to promote solidarity and harmony among people. We can all contribute to peace in the world every day by being considerate and generous to the people around us.
- So this special day is not only about friendship between individual persons, but also about friendship among people of different cultures, backgrounds and ages. And as Rita said, we can celebrate Friendship Day by sharing love and affection with the people who are important to us. Friends are special people who are there for each other in good times and in bad times, or as we say, they “stand by you through thick and thin”. But, Rita, is there a secret formula for true friendship?
- There may not be a formula, but an American psychologist has determined the characteristics of a true or not-so-true friend. We all know some of these traits a little: a true friend is honest, patient and kind. He or she listens to our problems and helps us to recognise our mistakes. But according to the psychologist, real friends help us to fight stress ... Yes, because they give us advice and they help us to make the right decisions ...
- Very true. Thank you so much, Rita.

- And now let's hear what our listeners have to say. We have Maria on the line. Welcome, Maria!
- Hello, Charles.
- So, Maria, what do you think a true friend is?
- Well, for me, a true friend is reliable. I have to be able to count on them, especially when I really need them. I don't have a lot of friends, but I have a small circle of people who I trust. My friends are people that I've known since my childhood and who are always there for me.
- Indeed, I agree. You know who your true friends are because they're there for you in good and bad times. But do the people in your circle also have characteristics that you don't like? If so, what are they?
- Well, I can't stand arrogant people. I'm quite a modest and shy person, and arrogant people make me feel uncomfortable. Fortunately, my friends are mostly like me.
- Maria, let's talk about your best friend. What do you like best about that person?
- My best friend is Michelle. I've known her my whole life. The best thing about her is her optimism. She's a positive person. For her, the glass is always half full – in every situation.
- Thank you, Maria. Let's talk to our next listener. Hi, Luke. The same question: What makes a true friend?
- ▲ Hi! Well, for me, a true friend is honest and straightforward and says what he thinks. One thing I really appreciate in other people is honesty.
- And what can't you stand in other people?
- ▲ I don't like people who are always late, because that shows disrespect for others. Sure, it can happen, now and then, that someone's late for an appointment because something came up. But there are some people who are never on time!
- Last question: Think of one of your good friends. What do you think his or her best characteristic is?
- ▲ Well, Nick is a good friend of mine. We've only known each other for four years, but he's like a brother to me. His best characteristic is his generosity. He's a selfless person. He always makes time to help anyone at a moment's notice. He's a really good guy.
- Thanks, Luke. And now let's talk to ...
